

Finding Our Fight by Campbell 12

We struggle with emotional pain and no one hears our cry,
We struggle with physical pain and no one knows how hard we try,
All these things weigh heavy on our soul and we wonder why,
We can't seem to break free.

We have to fight this war that's down deep inside.
And we know there is no way to set it aside.
And when no one understands it becomes amplified.
We know we must find our fight to survive.

We must find our fight
We must find our fight
We must find our fight
To survive.

We must find our fight
We must find our fight
We must find our fight
To survive.
To survive.

Now we know that there are those that will never hear our cry.
Now we know they will never know just how hard we try.
All these things weigh heavy on our soul and we wonder why,
We can't seem to break free.

We have to fight this war that's down deep inside.
And we know there is no way to set it aside.
And when no one understands it becomes amplified.
We know we must find our fight to survive.

We must find our fight
We must find our fight
We must find our fight
To survive.

We must find our fight
We must find our fight

We must find our fight
To survive.
To survive.

Now we know the storm will pass and we will live to tell.
Now we know the badge we wear and bid the pain farewell.
All these things weighed heavy on our soul and now we can yell.
We are finally free.

We have to fight this war that's down deep inside.
And we know there is no way to set it aside.
And when no one understands it becomes amplified.
We know we must find our fight to survive.

We must find our fight
We must find our fight
We must find our fight
To survive.

We must find our fight
We must find our fight
We must find our fight
To survive.
To survive.

We will find our fight,
We will find our fight to survive.
We will find our fight,
We will find our fight to survive.
We will survive.
